We look forward to receiving your scholarly contributions and to fostering an engaging and insightful dialogue within the vibrant fields of Theatre and Film Studies. This is an opportunity to share your research and ideas with a global audience, contributing to the advancement of knowledge and practice in these dynamic disciplines.

EDITORIAL NOTE

It is with unfeigned pleasure that we present Volume 6 of Elegbakna Journal of Theatre and Film Studies, a peer-reviewed periodical devoted to the advancement of interdisciplinary scholarship. This volume reaffirms the journal's enduring commitment to the cultivation of vigorous and consequential discourse at the confluence of theatre, film, and the wider humanities.

The present issue bears witness to the journal's breadth of intellectual remit and its demonstrated capacity to secure contributions of conspicuous rigour from a plurality of fields. We are gratified to include articles which traverse History and War Studies, Theatre and Film Studies, Cinematography and Broadcasting, English Studies, Linguistics and Language Studies, Adult Education, and Community Development, amongst others. Such heterogeneity confirms the journal's function as a facilitator of cross-disciplinary exchange and as a steadfast interlocutor in the examination of performance, representation, and cultural expression in their manifold forms.

The scholarship assembled herein offers a finely wrought arrays of theoretical exposition, critical appraisal, and empirical investigation, each piece responsive to the complexities of the contemporary conjuncture. From historical inquiries into war and collective memory to present examinations of identity, culture, and power, the contributions invite readers to re-evaluate received paradigms and to engage anew with the intricate reciprocities obtaining between theatre, film, and society.

As Theatre and Film Studies continues its inexorable evolution, Elegbakna Journal of Theatre and Film Studies remains resolute in its provision of a forum for emergent methodologies, novel theoretical architectures, and exacting critical perspectives. This volume exemplifies our allegiance to intellectual rigour, to innovation, and to the spirit of creative enquiry. We entertain no doubt that it shall constitute a substantive addition to the field.

The editorial board has laboured assiduously to ensure that every submission conforms to the most exacting standards of academic excellence. We convey our profound gratitude to the authors who have reposed their trust in us, and to our peer reviewers, whose erudition and judiciousness have been indispensable to the calibre of the articles published.

Elegbakna Journal of Theatre and Film Studies is devoted to the sustenance of a collegium of scholars, researchers, and practitioners united by a common fealty to theatre and film. It is our conviction that the articles contained herein shall find resonance across disciplinary frontiers and shall stimulate fresh avenues of research and creative endeavour.

The journal's interdisciplinary character is manifest in the diversity of subjects and methods represented — from exegeses of theatrical and cinematic texts to investigations of cultural policy and the politics of media representation. These studies attest to the depth, complexity, and vitality of theatre and film studies as a domain of enquiry.

We are particularly pleased to publish scholarship that addresses matters of immediate consequence: the politics of representation, the modalities of power and identity, and the constitutive role of theatre and film in the fashioning of cultural narratives. Such work affirms the journal's determination to remain in dialogue with the most urgent questions of our age.

As we contemplate the future, we are heartened by the prospects that lie before Elegbakna Journal of Theatre and Film Studies. We invite our readers to engage these contributions with critical attentiveness — to interrogate, to reflect, and to be enlarged by the learning and inventiveness herein displayed.

In conclusion, we tender our sincere thanks to our readers, contributors, and benefactors. We pledge ourselves anew to the maintenance of the highest standards of academic excellence and to the provision of a forum for innovative research and creative practice in theatre and film studies.
